

What is Juvenile Reentry Drug Court?

Juvenile Reentry Drug Court is for those youth offenders that are released from a commitment/residential programs. The program prepares youth for progressively increased responsibility through clear expectations, positive reinforcements, immediate accountability, and consequences for misconduct. The program also develops new resources and support as needed in the areas of work, education, training, and/or other services. The youth participants are monitored and tested on their ability to interact productively in the community. The program takes approximately 3-5 months to complete. There are no participation fees associated with this program.
